Today is Grandma's 70th birthday. We had a wonderful celebration at home!

Grandma does not like dining out. She prefers the warmth of homemade food. In the morning, Mum and Dad went to the wet market to pick up fresh seafood, including shrimps and crabs. Mum spent the entire afternoon in the kitchen. Although Grandma told her not to prepare too many dishes, she couldn't hide her excitement when she saw her favourites: crispy spring rolls and honey-glazed barbecued pork.

Meanwhile, Dad and I baked a birthday cake. Since we seldom cook, we had to ask Mum for help a few times!

What a magnificent meal it was! We enjoyed the food so much that we all ate until we were completely full. Seeing Grandma's big smile made it the perfect evening.
